Stories To Solve

There are 14 stories, some of which are obscure, but all have a message. There is the classic tale of a man having to transport a wolf, a goat, and a cabbage across a river without loss. His boat can only hold the man and one of the three items. If left together by the man, the wolf would eat the goat, or the goat would eat the cabbage.

Stories to Solve by George Shannon - Goodreads

Stories to Solve was wonderful, so I was quite looking forward to George Shannon's second collection of folk tales with clever solutions, solutions that you are supposed to be able to figure out yourself, then turn the page to see if you got it right. Aesop's tale of the "Crow and the Pitcher" is a good example of the type Shannon uses - here's the guts of the story, now turn the page to see how the crow got her water!
